A team of lawyers are stocking up on oily fish and bananas in preparation for a charity quiz.

Duncan Lewis works closely with MIND advocates to ensure those suffering with mental health issues get the support needed.

The firm, which is the biggest legal aid provider in the UK and has a dedicated charity committee, has signed up for this year's MasterMind in Harrow competition.

Preparations have already begun for the lawyers, who have been watching every game show on TV and downloading general knowledge apps.

Team members are also eating a diet of oily fish and bananas as well as doing 'quick-fire' questions with each other in the office to improve reaction times.

Team captain Rebecca Donson said: "We are looking forward to contributing to the valuable work that MIND does by putting our minds together against our worthy adversaries."

"On behalf of my team and firm, we would like to give a big thank you to the organisers of this event and to everyone who donated to this worthy cause."

If oily fish is good brain food, why is it that most oily fishes are stupid?
