Eight London councils call for more help to care for refugee children

Letter to home secretary Amber Rudd asks for more financial and casework support in Calais and the UK

Toufique Hossain, of Duncan Lewis solicitors, has warned that some of the children still in the camp are at risk: “We have been receiving texts from some of the children saying that bandits are coming into the containers and stealing their phones and their identity cards proving that they are minors,” he said. “We are very concerned to hear these reports.”
